Brentano's has just announced the publication of a new board game, Influence, "the Washington do-it-yourself playkit for the Advise-and-Consent set". Equipment for the game includes influence cards, control cards, a game board whose squares stand for various places in official and unofficial Washington, and, of course, dice. "By following the simple rules, you can become an enviable influence at graft gobbling, boondoggling, and power manipulation." The object of the game is to control one million dollars in cash or private and government properties, without having to be investigated or flee to Brazil. The biggest player goes first, and all disagreements over the rules are settled by shouting or brute force. If you want to emulate the careers of John Maragon, Harold Talbot, Sherman Adams, or Bobby Baker, the game can be purchased for $4.98 at Brentano's (Fifth Avenue & 47th Street, Manhattan) and presumably at other large department stores. Diplomacy may also be obtained at Brentano's or F. A. O. Schwarz in New York, Games Ltd. (925 Westwood Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif. 90024), California Notion & Toy Co. (573 Market St., San Francisco, Calif.), or by mail from Games Research Inc., 48 Wareham St., Boston, Mass. 02118. The price is $7.50.
